You Might be an Entrepreneur too…

No one is a born entrepreneur. Entrepreneurship is learnt across a period of time and the surrounding environment accelerates the learning. That means, if a person is with a group of entrepreneurs it directly implies he/she starts understanding and learning more about how to survive being an entrepreneur. That means there is no gene called as entrepreneur in a human body. It is learnt over a period of time.

In classic Indian situation people always tell gujartis (People hailing from Gujarat state) and Marwadis (A group of people from Rajasthan) are born entrepreneurs and no one needs to teach them business.

Is it true? No….

Generally in both the cases the parents, grandfather and even forefathers were always involved in a business or self-employment. So, when a child was in such a surrounding where he/she sees nothing but business and numbers it automatically gets embedded in their characteristic. So when a person learns and sees a similar thing day in and day out for 18 odd years so it's obvious the child also turns up into an entrepreneur.

So next time if someone points out that you were not born to be an entrepreneur, you have the answer with you!
